

Lego Piece Funnel

I'm going to go over the individual elements... after this I'll talk about combinations, why they work, what to avoid, and where to start.

Organic Pieces

These organic pieces work anywhere.. and they can be connected and woven together... anywhere where you provide some kind of value... they fit in... are they the best? That will depend on what data has to say.

The first 2 are lists... which we covered in the video series.

▼ Making RLLs

Grab a topic from your niche that people are interested in and ask.

"can I make it to 100 items on this topic without it being a big stretch".

You might be like "100 items?!?!?" Yeah... so... this framework is about the sheer volume of stuff you provide

As you can guess, it is only reserved for youtube... then you break it down to create a ton of short form content.

You can also make 3 on a short form video 3 times while promoting your opt-in (the videos will have quite a distance in the time they are posted)

This is a lot of items, you want the topic to be broad. If it's not broad enough, go more broad within what your audience cares about. So, don't go for supplements to health, as that is out of your scope.

You probably already have some ideas about that topic — do a brainstorming session, and in a google doc list the good ideas (or notion)

Search on google your topic, look at existing lists posts for inspiration. This will do two things:

A certain tip might give inspiration for a strategy or framework you hadn't thought of before

You can get 10+ items from a good article sometimes — when this happens, always cite the original source, that is the right thing to do.

You can use AI to brainstorm for you. Yes... there is bullshit that comes out, but don't think of AI as a god. I like to say: think of AI as a dumbass, even if it is a dumbass and it gets stuff wrong all the time, it will talk about something you didn't remember, and that will kickstart new items for you to make.

When you run out articles, and AI can't come up with anything useful anymore, go to posts that aren't lists, be it news, white papers, etc... and start reading to find out more items you can add, don't forget to mention those sources

It's VERY, VERY, VERY easy to just host this on your site, make it an opt-in, and create a bunch of content about it. Like, you create it once, and you grab 3 pieces every video when you're out of ideas, and then that will also promote your opt-in.

3 Birds with one stone: no creative block, builds rapport, and gets leads in the door.

Another type of list that works SUPER well;

Specially powerful for networking and making affiliation with other brands such as supplement and material brands is...

▼ The Curated List

This is one of the easiest content structures to make, you pick the topic and decide what material would be the best for them to buy.

Say that my topic was nutrition:

What supplement should I buy?

Where from?

Why?

And what not to buy too. Customers find it 2 times more valuable to avoid a mistake than to achieve something.

So make them avoid mistakes.

Tell who it is for and provide the links. If you do a good job, you might do some connections with the companies you mentioned and start making some money on affiliates while looking valuable to your audience.

Another use for them is to group together awesome content for them to watch for other creators outside your niche.

That way you can make connections with other people and they will feel in debt with you.

And then we have a step by step:

▼ The Step-by-Step

There's not much to it, use your expertise to map out where they are at currently (which you use research to find out or you look at your clients and see where they started and use that as a reference) and map it out to the goal in X number of steps.

The best step-by-step guides usually have a very clear goal, and a very discriptive way to get there.

For starters, the number of steps depends on the length of the content. 3 Steps might be the max for a one minute video for example.

Also... a step is not a staircase, a step is like one click of a mouse, don't try to compact too many actions into a single step. I mean, it is possible to create a BIG step, that is.. bundling steps inside of steps, these are content units, not the content, you can bundle a list inside a step for example. Or you can list them all out.

But let me give you some advice, if short form content is not working for you, it's like stand up comedy:

If you can't handle 5 minutes, how are you going to handle an hour telling jokes?

The road I recommend for personal trainers in content creation is:

Master to get them completely hoked on the first 3 seconds... and increase that.. to 4, 5, 6... until you get to 1 minute.

After that, try to get to 15 minutes,

After that 1 hour,

And so on until you can record a full-course and keep them fully engaged throughout.

If you do that, by the time you can create a course, you'll be unstoppable in content creation.

So try to keep it simple for now, and use one of this, then bundle and stack them as your videos get bigger

And the goal when creating these steps is that, they listen to it, and they know exactly what to do. They do not need to go anywhere else for info. Got it? That's the main goal on each step.

And then there are stories:

▼ Be the Source

Be the Source

This is the type of story that has happened btw.

(it doesn't matter, just budge comments with something specific you set.)

- What finding they disagree with?
- What they're most surprised by?

For "Be the Source" Content, ask stuff like:

Tip:

Make people start a conversation in the comments.

This will build engagement and give a ton of data at the same time.

Tip: Add charts, Graphs & Visuals

Just the act of including these, increases trust by 75%

That will actually provide them value with the research. Doing this will establish you as an authority in your niche (scammy people don't do research because it's hard) and build rapport

Tell people what this data means: after you give out the data, tell what it means, and tell what they have to do after knowing this data.

(Leave the rest for an opt-in you'll do about this. (if the content is too small))

Plug out most interesting nuggets to the video so people don't get bored.

Mention specific things you analyzed (for short form it can only be 1)
What you set out to learn from study

You're a personal trainer, you might not know exactly how it is done. He will tell you what to do to collect the data and how much you need.

After you collect the data, send it to him and you'll get the insights.

Then when creating a video about it mention:

I decided to talk about it because it usually works in every industry, but I can't find a way or a topic to fit it in here. It works particularly well for my industry. (B2B agencies)

Here's how it works:

You grab the topic and chose an insight people are interested on to research.

For example: If you add XYZ to your workouts what will happen to ABC

Then you start collecting that data. To collect it, I recommend working with a data analyst — a freelancer.

In here you basically do research.

▼ How I Did it

How I Did It

If you wanna earn instant credibility in your niche then listen up because this is the content format for you...

This is a bit of a mix between steps and stories... once you understand the fundamentals of the content units, you can bundle them and create new content formats that add up.

That is kind of an advanced move, if your short form content is not converting yet, stay away from the how I did it post until it does.

A lot of people do how I did it videos, but most case studies fail because they cover too much material in a single video.

Make it simple: Focus on one strategy, and give one mindblowing result.
And just center it around that.

Go on the topic you picked and grab a result you or your clients have achieved.

The how I did it post is usually reserved for long form content.

But if it has a small amount of steps, you can make it (2-3 steps, which is usually reserved for smaller goals, which is not as attractive so you have to make it timeless)

However, even if you have to make it timeless, try to not hold back when creating it...

Show people every little detail you can, while making it timeless.

This level of detail is what makes this template so powerful in building authority.

Tip:

Try to add as many visuals as you can in your post (show, don't tell)

This again also why documenting your days is so powerful, you can grab these stories in a snap after documenting your days for months on end.

Tip:

For this kind of format, to give them a clear goal, frame it around one number (e.g: How I lost 20 pounds)

Bonus: Brand Your Strategy

If you use a strategy that is yours and the steps you did are different from what's already out there and doesn't have a name, put your own name on it.

Of course, don't just repaint strategies that already exist with your name. But if you have a unique strategy, technique or approach — give it a unique name — it's easy to remember and share.

It just needs to contain anything new though, you don't need to completely revolutionize the market.

Are there more organic content formats? Millions.. there are endless possibilities... but this works great... if you ever want to create your own... I would recommend it because you learn a lot in the process.... creating your own pieces is a great way to learn.. but of course chill down until you can keep them fully engaged on all of these formats for hours...

Omnichannel Sequences

Single

Email Blasts

For this strategy to work, have an email list of over 1000+ people.

This is about sending email subscribers to your content, reels, blog post, youtube videos, anywhere you provide free value. (works great and provides them value)

Email subscribers are more likely to comment and share your stuff.

This will increase open rates (sending emails when you publish a new post is a great way to promote it)

Be sure to make it simple and short.

Here's an example:

Name,

I [and then you give a 1-3 line explanation of the content, for example: spent 12 weeks of my life creating a flexibility workout,

And what supplements you should take for the best flexibility,]

[You put your video thumbnail in the background with a youtube play button]

[Then you say something like: let me know what you think in the comments section]

I only recommend doing the email blast for youtube videos, here's my reason:

- You make too many reels per month and it would get annoying
- The value is way higher so by only email blasting when the value is huge.. they will immediately click.

It's a good method when you start making a lot of youtube videos.

New Spots Opened

On this, you want to be very careful.. because it's a promotion... make it upfront and still include value, and of course.. it works well on high ticket.. like 1-1 training or group coaching.

Hey name, before we get into the value:

There are new spots opened on my 1-1 training... a lot of people lose the chance because they don't get warned...

They usually fill up in 2-3 days... have a look: [link]

Alright... now for today's business... [then tell the value]

You'll of course change the email to have your personality... what actually has new spots opened, and how fast the spots fill up (if it's more then 1 week, don't add it)

Respond to Form

On this, you want to encentivise them with value (that they would kill to get), now you might think that providing this much value is bad.. either because of the time it takes or because you're giving too much away:

- Point 1: People don't distinguish WHERE they get the value from, they just know that they got value from YOU. There's actual studies on this.
- Point 2: By spending your time to make a good resource it is a amazing and conversions will increase forever.
 - Besides that people with build goodwill with you, you will grow and your personal training skills will also increase significantly, because by organizing your thoughts and creating frameworks,
 - It makes things so much better for you on the long term, specially in the delivery stage of business.

This goes well anywhere.. but particularly well at a point before an important decision like buying 1-1 training, because you want to know what is crossing their mind at that time.

Hey Name,

Before getting to the value: I need you to help me understand my audience better (so that I can create better content)

So would you mind answering a form? [make that underlined text the link]

I'll give you [badass resource] for it. Thanks.

Now let's get to... [then go to the value]

Again I repeat... don't forget to add your own personality to the text... this is all a starting point for you to make your own emails.

Gift Mail

Ok so this is for loyalty programs... basically.. to keep customers in.. we want to send a short and sweet email with a gift... all the backend is that there is milestones, and when they reach a big one set by you, they get sent a gift from ongoody.com.

Hey Name,

Saw you [reached goal], check this out :)

[link to pick a gift]

By the way... value tomorrow (and yes this is an automated message [if it's not 1-1 training: but it's the intention that counts!, if it is 1-1 training: don't worry, I'll give you a real congrats on this weeks' call. [or the next depending on your case]])

You want to change it to your brand voice of course...

Exclusive Content Blast

We talked about the email blast.. but that is not exclusive enough for SMS... mention the video you sent to email... and then tell something like “but for SMS, I’ve decided to create [extra resource related to the video that is worth a lot]” — that way they see the original video and thank you 2 fold.

Here’s an example of the SMS you could send:

“hey name, I sent you a yt video to email. But because you’re SMS, I decided to give ya a free “extension” to this video, check it here after watching it: [link]”

After they’ve been in the list for a while and they know the deal:

“hey name, I sent you a yt video to email. But because you’re SMS, you know the deal, here’s it’s SMS exclusive resource: [link]”

Sequence

When exchanging goodwill you have 3 options: the basic promotion sequence (exchange of money), the referral sequence (exchange of leads) and testimonial sequence (exchange of social proof)

Referral Sequence

Email 1:

This email will be a gift mail... we only ask for referrals when they reached a goal after all

2 Day Delay

Email 2:

This email's goal is for them to know about the referral program.

Tell them what they can gain from referring someone, and why you are telling this, tell them how to tell you this info.

...when the newsletter drops...

Email 3:

Include free value.

Before it though, mention some scarcity for the referral program:

| "Oh before I get to it, remember that referral I told you about?

| Yeah that <<object they gain>> will end soon, I don't know what to put next honestly, any ideas tell me?"

| And give them a link to a form with 5 options.

| If they don't respond to Email 3: show them an SMS, "Which one do you prefer: Option 1, Option 2, Option 3, Option 4 or Option 5?"

Then put the link to a form (give them options)

This will get you data and increase referrals.

SMS:

I sent to email but I'll also say it here: about that <<object>> for the referral program? I decided to switch it (I want more referrals duh...). So would you like:

- give
- 5
- options
- out
- now

If they respond:

yeah, thanks.. I'll send in some value tomorrow but here, I think you'll enjoy this: (give a resource in exchange for their goodwill... to get it back)

...a few days later...

Email 4:

If they responded to the form:

Depending on the option they picked, give them that:

"Before we get to the value, saw you asked for XYZ on the form. Welp, I decided to go with that, so, if you refer one person I'll give you that ok?"

Yes we're doing all 5, we're giving them the sweat illusion of power. Which is a bit unethical I assume, but it gets them what they want. And if it helps them... I don't see anything wrong with it...

SMS:

If they responded to the SMS pool:

"saw you asked for XYZ on the form, welp, I decided to go with that, so, if you refer one person I'll give you that ok? (value tomorrow)"

We mention "(value tomorrow)" to not bring down conversions.

A week later...

Email 4:

Our last option is to use scarcity on the thing they want:

If they responded via Email:

"Before we start, I just wanted to let you know that XYZ is switching in 3 days. As you know I reward people who help other people, so if you want it, you might want to introduce someone out"

SMS:

If they responded via SMS:

"I just wanted to let you know that XYZ is switching in 3 days, as you know I reward people who help other, so if you want it, you might want to introduce someone out"

And that's it. Hope it helped, go create a referral program, if you don't apply this, it's useless.

Testimonial Sequence

Getting text testimonials

To get simple video testimonials — all you need to do is create a good email and sms sequence... I actually recommend trying to get them to record a video testimonial — or if you really changed their life — you can start with the case study...

This is why it's important to have a CRM and register this stuff out as you work with them... because then the process can be made automatic...

But let's have a look at the ones you wanna ask last... text testimonials...

How to get a text testimonial?

With a 5 email & SMS sequence — this is easy. And BTW... getting a testimonial is very similar to getting a referral... what you want to do (or at least what I would) is to first get a testimonial, and when it's registered to the CRM that we got a testimonial.. move to the referral... what kind of testimonial you'll ask them to get?

Case study... Video or Text?

It depends on how good of a job you did... if you believe they'd gladly be a case study... go for that. And if they refuse... scale down until they get to text.. if they also refuse that: something is very wrong.

Email 1

Right after they reach their goal — congratulate them... if it's close to 1-1 training in value and volume — then you can personalize the message for them or even attach a video...

After that meet status quo and go straight to the value... I won't go over upselling them... in this email, you could put it. I do prefer to put that in the second email to not sound like "congrats, do you want this?" — Though honestly at this stage they trust you enough... but it still sounds wrong to me ethically... sorry.

So just give the value... maybe a warmup video... and hey... be a human... give them a nice gift, if it's close to 1-1 training — make it personalized — give them something you know they would want.. you can even box it like a christmas gift and deliver it to their house... people just love that.

To send the gift (in case you wanna do it — which I recommend for 1-1) I recommend checking this: www.postal.com/use-case/customer-success.

Email 2

Ok... here you could do 2 things, you could go with the referral or the upsell — those are the two I use... this is really a number game on what affects most... when you have a lot of testimonials, say a 1000, one more wouldn't be worth much. But the upsell would make you money.

Since this is to get testimonials.. I'll go with the referral... we talked about this in the video series... basically, you want to ask for the referral, and give a valid reason:

Hey [name],

Last email I congratulated you about reaching XYZ goal... we need your help:

So we actually would like feedback (what we did wrong, what was right),

This is so we can make our service better and help more people,

I do value people that help me get feedback for my service so... if you complete this simple form,

I will give you (resource they want)

Notice that this is just an example... and it's slightly different from the one I showed in the video series.

Email 3

OK... now it's up to making sure they heard what you said by repeating but not being annoying:

Before we get into the value..

Just a warning:

Since I value feedback to improve my services,

For all people that leave out an honest testimonial here, I'll send XYZ

Again: you do not ask this on promotional or upsell emails.. plus I would recommend to do that 1 email ago.

Email 4

Now it's time to build some urgency:

Before we get into the value.. I saw you still didn't leave a testimonial... if you did like you can tell me...

And if you don't like the resource... don't worry, I was thinking of switching it in 3 days anyways... here's the link: [link]

Alright now let's get to it... [get to value]

Email 5

Ok this is the last time I'll ask for it.. no pressure, just saying: I switched the resource to ABC.. here's the link to get it: [link]

[Get to the value]

Then after this we'll go into SMS:

SMS 1

First... you give them kudos for their goal reached:

| Saw you [Goal]. Check your email :)

You'll have a gift sent to them in email that they can see.

SMS 2

| Hey [name], now you've reached our goal... wanna give us some feedback? [link]

| We do appreciate people who help make our services better... so we'll give you [resource] in exchange.

| I've actually sent this to your email too.. just to make sure you see it...

SMS 3

| Hey [name], first... value tomorrow... second... I saw your feedback didn't come through yet (after I sent 2 more emails..)

| I'm going to alter the resource in 3 days if that's the problem... here's the link:

| [Link]

And then leave it at that... if they still didn't respond.. something is wrong and you have to talk with them.

Getting video testimonials

Before going and actually getting text testimonials, you want to try and get a video testimonial... so for that, here's a sequence — this is to be done after you congratulate them, like I told in the last section.

Email 1

Hey [name], I'll make this fast before getting to the value,

I would like a video testimonial, like, you actually record a video, so that other people know that I'm a credible source...

That would help me a lot, so if I am good enough for you to want to help, click here: [Link]

Now... let's get to the value...

The game here is asking for it, and if you are good and have goodwill and a good relationship with them then OF COURSE they will help you.

So the game is just that. Just letting them know you accept this kind of payment in exchange for their goodwill.

Goodwill is a commodity... it can be exchanged for money, referrals, testimonials or stored. What you exchange it for depends on what you need most.

The link will take them to a video where you explain how to record the video testimonial and thank them for it.

Email 2

| Hey [name], before we get to the value,
| If you think I deserve a video testimonial for my services, just click here:
| [link]
| If not, reply to this email and tell me the problem,
| Alright let's get to it..

Alright, you'll continue to reinforce this 3 more times... next time you'll sprinkle a free resource. And after that, you want to add scarcity on that resource. On the last time, you'll say it's the last time you'll ask...

If they reply to the email, respond or have someone who responds for you.

You might notice this is quite similar to getting text testimonials... yes it is. The only difference is the exchange of goodwill.

Ideally, you want them to exchange goodwill, and then you give them a surprise in exchange for the video testimonial in exchange.

Getting stories and case studies

This converts very well, and they are not hard... I mean a bit... If you really think that what you've done to that prospect was lifechanging and worth a lot to them... you want to get a story...

Because that's an amazing selling point...

Send them a personalized video via sms congratulating them, telling you sent something to their and then tell them:

I think that a lot of my audience would love to know about your story,

Tell me, do you mind if I had a call with you and then just put that on my website for the audience to know of the success they can have with the program?

If you really did a good job, 99% of the times... they will say yes... the only way they so know is if there is something stopping them from doing it.. like literally (e.g: they don't have a webcam to talk in zoom)

Automating testimonials and when to do it.

You only automate testimonials when you are remotely involved in the delivery of your services (e.g a course)

If that is not the case... you want to add personalization of some kind... you automate it over time as you get more and more data...

But for the 1-1s, that's never going to change, you'll need to record a video and congratulate them.

Deadline Sequence

This goes well on stuff that is limited... of course. Specially by time... but it can work by scarcity by mentioning the number of spots open... or both... preferably both.

You want to do a few emails... first... give value in all of them in some way to reduce unsubscribe rates.. deadline sequences have high unsubscribe rates.. you only use them in webinars or offers with urgency that are near their end... so be ready for that..

Second, you want to do 7 emails:

- 1 week before
- 36 hours before
- 24 hours before
- 6 hours before

- 3 hours before
- 30 minutes before
- 3 minutes before (optional)

If you really need the money you can do the optional 3 minute one.

Now let's get to how this is all done:

1 Week before — Here introduce the thing:

Email:

| "Hey name, before we get to it, quick message:

| We spent 12 weeks making a training program, and we're giving the bad boy a first spin,

| We'll close sales in one week, we don't know if we'll do it again...
(we'll see if we can handle the costs)

| Feel free to check out this link if you wanna learn more.

| Now let's get to it.. [value]"

SMS:

No SMS on this one.

36 hours before — here we reinforce it and give social proof:

Email:

| Hey Name,

| Remember that thing I talked about 4 days ago? XXX people already had if for a spin here's their opinion:

| [put a good testimonial]

| Sales close in 36 hours though.. if you want to have a look.. click the link.

| If not... let's.. [get to the value]

SMS:

"if you didn't see your email yet... I have new program, and people are liking it.. I think you'll like it too have a look: [link]. I'll send you some value tomorrow ok?"

24 hours before — here we hook them with a gift.. [free resource with a lot of value]

Email:

| Name, I decided to give you a gift today...

| Before that: the [offer name] ends in 24 hours... tick tick, if you want to [outcome]... have a look at that..

| Fyi: I am not a bad guy, and I don't wanna pressure you, but I really think it could help you out.

| Now.. have a look at it here.. and don't tell ANYONE. I am hiding the fact that I am giving this, shhhhhhhh.

Here we're making a skit, just know that you got to adapt it to your brand voice.

SMS:

Here, make a newsletter SMS message giving way more value than usual.

| And it's free because you can ask for your money back if [guarantee]

| I will send you value tomorrow, I just wanted you to know.

Here we're making a skit, just know that you got to adapt it to your brand voice.

SMS:

No SMS on this one.

3 hours before — here we are straightforward

Email:

| pv: free value inside btw

| Hey Name, I will close [offer name] in 3 hours...

| You're probably worried or stuff like that.. no biggie... I'll give you an exclusive sneak peak, whataboutthat hmmm?

| (my marketing manager's gonna KILL me if he knows I shared you this)

Here we're making a skit, just know that you got to adapt it to your brand voice.

SMS:

Remeber that program I mentioned a few messages ago? It closes in 3 hours... I'll warn one more time... if you don't want it that's ok.. but I send it to make sure people who want it remember. Here's the link:
[link]

30 minutes before — here we are also straightforward

Email:

subject line: last chance

pv: 30 minutes left

Hey Name — there is literally 30 minutes left...

So... here's the link.

I'll just assume that maybe.. *just maybe.... you're sleeping.

Maybe in a coma for the past week?

Anywho.. if you want to have a sneak peek click the link.

Besides that after you sign up... I've got something waiting for you inside.. (shhhh... it's a secret)

Here we're making a skit, just know that you got to adapt it to your brand voice.

SMS:

We will do no SMS on this one... we'll save it for last

3 minutes left — this truly is our last chance

Email:

| subject line: 176... 175...

| pv: there are 174 seconds left.

| Hey name... yeahhh... I hope you like the newsletter tomorrow but for real...

| If you want this it's your last shot.

| That's it. Bye. (oh btw, the newsletter tomorrow will be insane, got something very nice ready for ya.)

Here we're making a skit, just know that you got to adapt it to your brand voice.

SMS:

Alright... time to finish:

| Alright... last time I'll warn, it closes in 3 minutes.

These go specially well with offers that have a time limit on them. And if the user has been in the email list for a long time and engagement is high... they will probably like it.

Basic Promotion Sequence

This is very basic... mix warmup videos in and make the promotion look like a warmup video... give value in the promotion.. but include the CTA at the start (or after the intro, and tell them how to act of course).

This CTA should be both in the warmup video and the email. (if you give value in the email.)

“Don’t shove it down their throat, but with your hand open” — Alex Hormozi

Warmup Sequence

This is very simple... you what you want to do is to have a 6 or more email sequence and preferably have warmup videos on each email...

This is useful when they enter the newsletter.

Now warmup videos are basically content... like 5-15 minute videos for them to check out.

To actually structure the emails you want to do it like an email blast every time.

You'll also do this on SMS in the way.. but give exclusive and more informational and more high quality warmup videos.

Lead Nurture Sequence

Email 1 — The day before

On this, the email will be short and sweet, and here is the silver bullet: show your face.

Create a video of yourself talking about what you will cover on the call, if you have a whiteboard, show it with that. Tell their name in the video and put that on the email you will send.

Another silver bullet I have for this email is just making them feel engaged... ask a question in the video that can be answered with yes or no... just to open a conversation.

Email 2 — The morning of the appointment day

Here just let them know that the appointment is today, and tell them "You should receive one of my newsletters 3 hours from now, it's automating can do nothing about it :)" and then tell them "feel free to read it though"

The newsletter will be the next silver bullet, which we will cover in just a second.

Email 3 — 1 hour before

Here you will give the link to the appointment and then wait for them on the call

Ok, now, besides personalized emails, you will send a “newsletter email” made specifically for this situation.

Truth is, this newsletter email is created specifically for the lead nurture and it talks about a topic that in the sales page for this call, we put in as the main selling point. If we do that, and provide things they do not know about and reward them in the newsletter, not only will they remember why they booked the call, the necessity to attend the call will grow.

Ok, so that's 4 touchpoints... what about the other 3? That's where SMS comes in...

SMS 1 — The day before, 3 hours distant from the first email.

Here you'll simple tell "alrighty, tomorrow we have an appointment, I sent you an email with more details about it, check it out, see you there" — of course, adapt it your brand voice.

SMS 2 — At a random moment of the day

Here, it will be like the email, just tell him "Hey, I just made a new video, I knew our call in in X or so hours from now, but if you wanna have a look, here's the link:"

SMS 3 — At the moment of the Call

Here just say: "I am joining the call now, here's the link, if there's a problem, just text me"
