There are 4 things I will talk about

- Subject lines
- Copy
- Warmup Videos
- CTAs & Promos
- Sequences

First subject lines... you wanna make it outrageous on their mind:

This works like headlines in the principles not structure.

If in 50 characters you can convey a sense of recency, relevancy, include a celebrity, make it next to where they are (if you're a local personal training), if you can put some kind of conflict, if you can make it unusual and ongoing. You'll get a click...

Of course that is really hard.. but think of it like a checklist.

For the copy... make it you... how do you write? Not copywriting principles or any bullshit like that... structure → please do.. voice → Keep. It. You.

I have a guide on making good copy... I will leave it in the resources..

Next, include warmup videos IF YOU CAN ENGAGE THEM FOR THAT LONG.

They are an absolute game changer.

For when you do Promos, make it look like value and provide the promo at the start... if you did warmup videos, which I hope you do or will, include the CTA at the start and make it super simple to follow...

And go straight to the value.

No problem in being upfront about it if it's good.

Lastly for the sequences I recommend, check the resources.. I left it in my Lego Piece Funnel resource.
