The single greatest predictor of lead flow is the opt-in.

You don't want to create "good content"... you want to absolutely blow their minds... and try to do it without repeating cost...

You could do a video series for example... or a challenge or program... independent of how it is framed... the insides gotta be a pallace... you gotta make that gold.. on the inside... and show it's true self.. if you make gold advertise gold... don't lower yourself down... and even better... make diamonds and advertise gold... and then make it unexpected and blow their minds on the inside and build rapport and sell more...

But that is business model... sticking to the topic...

Besides the obvious opt-in value increase we have making better organic content.

Organic content is what retain them enough for them to check out your opt-in... so to create better organic content.. you yourself have to learn to engage.

This is like standup comedy... firstly one minute jokes... then 5 minutes and so on...

And then lastly we have referrals..

This is the silver bullet of lead flow.. if you can create an automation, something managed by customers to bring exponentially more people in. Then you won...

To do that, check a email sequence I left in the resources...

Besides that... if a customer can't pay a certain product or service you have or offer than you could be like "ok I'll give you a 40% or so discount, but you gotta get 5 people into my business and they gotta sign up to personal training first."

This works better then it sounds like.. barter is phenomenal.

You can also make it a necessary part of offer in case they want something like bonuses or maybe the offer itself.. like the win your money back offer... which I mention during my "got business problems video" [in resources]

So, set up these sequences.. and check the got business problems video to know about the money back offer.
